Czechoslovakia: Prague has announced what could be a major change in future economic planning and management aimed at overcoming serious difficulties in the economy.

According to State Planning Commission chief Cernik, industries and enterprises will not be assigned quantitative production goals and consideration is being given to abolishing goals for gross value of production. Such reforms, together with others recently announced, are designed to remedy the stress on quantity rather than quality of production.

A variety of planned tasks will continue to be assigned. Cernik did not specify these, but they probably will be related to the current emphasis on product quality and cost reduction. Central control over enterprises will be achieved mainly through allocations of investments and materials.

The only Communist country not assigning quantitative goals to enterprises is Yugoslavia, a maverick in economic policies.
